

Please Hear What I Say

Words and Music © 1991 by Jamie McElman,
Mountain Rise Music, All Rights Reserved

Two young hearts, restless souls
Dream of holding the world in their hands
Combined, they're strong
But apart, so alone
And the loneliness gnaws at their plans.

And sometimes, there's just so much resistance
That their love seems beyond their command.

Lightning struck on the day they met
And they both felt it stirring inside
And they stopped and stared
As if unaware
That the other looked back into their eyes.

And there flared up a passion
That they soon knew was too strong to hide.
And they whispered
Please hear what I say
All my life I wondered if I'd ever feel this way.

Late at night, in each others arms
You know they'd talk about changing their lives
But as the words fell off, each lost in thought
Would wonder if their love would survive.

For they heard different callings
That would soon bring a fork in the road
You'd hear 'em cry
Please hear what I say
In choosing, there lies danger
We'll lose either way.

Two young hearts, restless souls
Dream of holding the world in their hands.