

Yeah, You Were

Words and Music © 2002 by Jamie McElman,
Mountain Rise Music, All Rights Reserved

What a spirit lived in you
That helped you navigate this maze of lefts and rights
And never compromised your often lonely point of view
Convention fled before your attitude
Yeah, you were one of a kind
Yeah, you were.

You were a child of privilege
Steeped in liberal arts
And a writer
Running from the wisdom of the patriarch
Four walls - they couldn't hold you
No, you heard the siren's call
And you followed
To the envy of us all
Yeah, you were one of a kind
Yeah, you were.

What a spirit lived in you
That gave you courage to thyself be true
And go in search of the exotic, and the new
Then write your vision just as if we saw it too
Yeah, you were one of a kind
Yeah, you were.