

The Ending Always Stays The Same

Words and Music © 1983 by Jamie McElman,
Mountain Rise Music, All Rights Reserved

How do you handle the days that come tangled in chains
When the changes leave you drained of your strength?
There've been confrontations before
Do you need many more
Before you set aside your blinder and think?

Hey, what's happening here?
Yeah, and who set the course
That left you lonely
And kind of empty inside?
How much damage was done
By your doubts and your needs
Did you leave her any reason to try?
Is there a reason to try?

Learn to see through the ways
That she showed you she cared
No longer worry 'bout her turning her back
Let her be now, let your doubts disappear
And maybe you'll find some of the answers you lacked.

Hey, what's happening here?
I think you see through the void
That left you searching
That kept you wondering so long
Once you let your vision clear
Watch the stone roll away
Can you feel it, as your strength reappears?

What will you feel through the days
That the future unfolds
And will the distance leave desire intact?
One day you'll see now
Once you master the pain
That this one was more fantasy than fact

Hey, what's happening here?
You're flying solo again
Can you be noble instead of maudlin this time?
Yeah, you'll miss her even after today
But the fact still remains
That you can't change her
Or the ending, just the same
The ending always stays the same.