Your destination is distant
The signs show you the way
You rest a while by the side of the road
Before the heat of the day
Long shadows of morning
Soft breeze in your hair
And your spirit is soaring...

First you conquer the mountains
Between you and your quest
Up from the valley, across the mountain's backbone
Your body put to the test
Fields of poppies and meadows
Rising up through the clouds
Ruins shrouded in shadow...

Once surrounded by strangers
Pilgrims on their own path
Through your journey some'll come and will go
Pay attention to that
No one comes uninvited
We arrive right on time
And together our future's decided...

Sunset on the horizon
Between spires of stone
Countless souls have passed this moment in time
And we're never alone
Sown fields after harvest
Once green, turning brown
Sky hinting of scarlet...
