

The Wizard

If you turn the light out
Chances are they'll never know
You're just inside the door
The truth is bright out
Your secrets wither in the light
We've seen your face before.

You're a man of noble means
And gentle heart
Too distracted by the real world
To truly play your part
You project up on the screen
What you want the world to see
So, the people saw the wizard.

What made you give up?
And settle in with just your fear
There like some precious stone
Friends, they moved on
Your life became a mythic tale
More secrets to keep your own.

You're a man of many gifts
But not the drive
To unleash them on the real world
And let your true flag fly
You hide your face behind the screen
And forge your image in 2D
So, we only see the wizard.

If the tales you tell are true
Then they're easy to remember
If you look us in the eye
Resist the urge to lie
Then there's nothing
Nothing to remember.

It's time to wake up
And come to terms with who you are
You can't blame the world anymore
You're more than enough
When you decide to claim your joy
Help waits outside the door

Pay no attention to the man
Behind the screen
He's no great and powerful wizard
He's just an ordinary man
Living simply 'cause he can
Not some great and powerful wizard.
